

Put - Sprinter Open End Nokia

PRODUCT DESCRIPTION

Sprinter Open End products are leveraged products with no fixed maturity, but like standard Sprinter warrants are characterised by the fact that they expire worthless with immediate effect when reaching or falling below (call) or reaching or exceeding (put) the particular knock-out level. Due to the low amount of capital employed in comparison to a direct investment in the underlying, they enable overproportionate participation in the performance of the underlying in accordance with the leverage and can therefore be used for speculation or the hedging of positions. The strike price and knock-out level are adjusted daily. The following applies as a rule: The closer the actual market price of the underlying to the strike price, the greater the leverage effect. In contrast to standard warrants, the price of the Sprinter Open End is only marginally affected by volatility.

In Switzerland, these financial instruments are considered structured products. They are not collective investment schemes within the meaning of the Swiss Federal Act on Collective Investment Schemes (CISA), and are therefore not subject to the regulations of the CISA or the supervision of the Swiss Financial Market Supervisory Authority FINMA. The investors bear the issuer's or the guarantor's credit risk.

FL(a): Strike before adjustment. r: Interest rate (LIBOR resp. EURIBOR); Interest rate for Money Market deposit overnight which is determined by the paying and calculation agent in the trading currency of the underlying. FS: Current financing spread. n: Number of calendar days between the current adjustment date (exclusive) and the next adjustment date (inclusive). divf: Taxation factor for a possible dividend payment. PROSPECTS OF PROFIT AND LOSSES

Sprinter Open Ends offer the opportunity to benefit in a leveraged way from a positive (Call-Sprinter Open End) or negative (Put-Sprinter Open End) performance in the price of the underlying. The potential for profit is thus basically unlimited for Call-Sprinter Open Ends; for Put-Sprinter Open Ends, the maximum potential for profit is limited and reached when the market price of the underlying drops to zero. Based on the leverage effect, changes in the value of the underlying can overproportionally affect the value of Sprinter Open Ends. There is a possible profit from the positive difference between the sales price that is achieved or the repayment amount and the issuing or purchase price that is paid. The redemption amount receivable in the event of any exercise of the warrant depends on the figure by which the market price of the underlying exceeds (Call-Sprinter Open End) or falls below (Put-Sprinter Open End) the actual strike price on the exercise day. Sprinter Open Ends do not yield current income. As a rule, they lose value if, in the case of Call-Sprinter Open Ends, the price of the underlying does not rise or, in the case of Put-Sprinter Open Ends, there is no fall in the price of the underlying. Sprinter Open Ends have no set maturity but expire worthless with immediate effect when the knock-out level is reached. The actual knock-out level is identical to the actual strike price. The strike price is adjusted daily to the market and depends on the previous strike price and financing spread, among other factors. In this regard, the financing spread matches the financing costs of the issuer through the interest on deposits. The risk for an investment in Sprinter Open Ends is based not only on the leverage effect but also on the danger of a knock-out event occurring, which is significantly greater than it would be for a direct investment. On the basis of the daily market adjustment of the strike price, a knock-out event may also occur in the case of a previously unchanged market price of the underlying, thus resulting in expiration without any value.

SIGNIFICANT RISKS FOR INVESTORS

Currency risks

If the underlying(s) is(are) denominated in a currency other than the product's reference currency, investors should bear in mind that this may involve risks due to fluctuating exchange rates and that the risk of loss not only depends on the performance of the underlying(s) but also on any unfavourable performance of the other currency or currencies. This does not apply to currency-hedged products (quanto structure).

Market risks

The general market performance of securities is dependent in particular on the development of the capital markets which, for their part, are influenced by the general global economic situation as well as by the economic and political framework conditions in the respective countries ("market risk"). Changes to market prices such as interest rates, commodity prices or corresponding volatilities may have a negative effect on the valuation of the underlying(s) or the structured product. There is also a risk of market disruptions (such as trading or stock market interruptions or discontinuation of trading) or other unforeseeable occurrences concerning the respective underlyings and/or their stock exchanges or markets taking place during the term or upon maturity of the structured products. Such occurrences can have an effect on the time of redemption and/or on the value of the structured products.

In the event of trading restrictions, sanctions and similar occurrences, the issuer is entitled, for the purpose of calculating the value of the structured product, to include at its own discretion the underlying instruments at their most recently traded price, at a fair value to be established at its sole discretion or indeed as worthless, and/or additionally to suspend pricing in the structured product or liquidate the structured product prematurely.

Secondary market risks

Under normal market conditions, the issuer or the lead manager intend to post bid- and ask-prices on a regular basis. However, neither the issuer nor the lead manager is under any obligation with respect to investors to provide such bid- and ask-prices for specific order or securities volumes, and there is no guarantee of a specific liquidity or of a specific spread (i.e. the difference between bid- and ask-prices), for which reason investors cannot rely on being able to purchase or sell the structured products on a specific date or at a specific price.

Issuer risk

The value of structured products may depend not only on the performance of the underlying(s), but also on the creditworthiness of the issuer/guarantor, which may change during the term of the structured product. The investor is exposed to the risk of default of the issuer/guarantor. For further information on the rating of Vontobel Holding AG or Bank Vontobel AG, please see the issuance programme.
